Hi,

We're starting October with the updated job listings, a new testimony in Voices of the World, and three freshly published blog articles. As always, this is just a summary — spend as much time as you can on whatever calls to you.

This week's job listings

We keep updating, every week, the list of real openings published by companies and organisations across Gran Canaria — tracked, filtered and organised to save you time. We're not a recruitment agency: we connect you directly with the official source of each listing.

TESTIMONY

María Elena, a story I found at a bus station

“Living on the street doesn’t mean you stop having a story, a profession, an education, a family, dreams. It doesn’t mean you stop being who you are.”

An unexpected encounter at a bus station with a Cuban woman experiencing homelessness: a reflection on dignity, migration, loss, and the stories we don’t see at first glance.

PROCEDURES & RIGHTS

Getting a foreign degree recognised in Spain: what no one explains at the start

“Is that qualification worth anything, or do you have to start from zero?” The short answer is “it depends” — and that short answer is exactly what causes the most anxiety.

Homologación, equivalencia, convalidación or reconocimiento: which procedure you need depending on your foreign qualification, what documents the Ministry asks for, and what to expect from the timelines.

What happens to your CV when you send it: how ATS systems read it

“Your CV may go through an automated system before it ever reaches a person.”

Many companies use ATS systems to filter CVs before a person ever sees them. What they look for, how it affects formatting, and what you can do to make your CV read well in both cases.

You've been offered a job: 10 things worth checking before you say yes

“You start tomorrow, and we'll sort out the contract later.” Before saying yes, there are a few things worth looking at.

What's worth checking in a job offer before accepting it: the position, the salary, working hours, the type of contract, the collective agreement and other essential conditions.
